

Juan Carlos Furnari

Manager, Coordination and Planning of Nuclear Medicine and Radiotherapy Centres, National Atomic Energy Commission, Argentina

Juan Carlos Furnari holds a PhD degree in Chemical Sciences, from the University of Buenos Aires, specialized in nuclear and radiochemistry.

Since 1981 he serves in the National Atomic Energy Commission (CNEA) in various functions of responsibility.

He is currently Manager of Coordination and Planning of Nuclear Medicine and Radiotherapy Centers. Manager of the Institute of Nuclear Technology “Dan Beninson” (CNEA and San Martin National University –UNSAM-). He is also director and teacher of the specialization in radiochemistry and nuclear applications at Dan Beninson Institute. President of the Foundation Nuclear Diagnostic Center, Buenos Aires.

From 2008 to 2022 he was Manager of Nuclear Technology Applications, in charge of the Ezeiza Atomic Center of CNEA.

His expertise areas comprise nuclear chemistry, radiochemistry, radiopharmacy, radioisotope metrology, Radioisotope production, quality management, among others. Director and jury of doctoral thesis and masters of the Beninson, Balseiro and Sábato Institutes (CNEA and UNSAM) and the National Technological University.

He has a extense history as university professor at the University of Buenos Aires, del Salvador, Favaloro, Maimónides, Balseiro Institute, UNSAM and National Technological University.

He has published in various scientific journals, book chapters and presented in congresses more than 120 original works.